All products have a sell by date of Dec. 3 through Dec. 6. The products are being recalled out of an abundance of caution and have been removed from store shelves. The products were shipped to about 500 Food Lion stores in eight states. A list of affected stores can be found below (see attached file).

Customers are advised not to eat these products and return them to any Food Lion store for a full refund. No illnesses have been reported associated with these products at this time. The recall was initiated because Food Lion was notified by its supplier, TGD Cuts, LLC, these items include celery, which may have the presence of E. coli.
