Why:

More than 680,000 metro-area residents, including 200,000 children are facing persistent hunger and malnutrition, a 25 percent increase since 2006. The Capital Area Food Bank provides area residents with 27.5 million meals a year and empowers residents struggling with hunger through various nutrition education programs designed to address the root causes of hunger. The CAFB distributes food through a network of 700 partner agencies located throughout the region. Food Lion is helping to alleviate hunger in the Capital area.

The Capital Area Food Bank, a member of Feeding America, was founded on January 15, Martin Luther King's birthday, in 1980 and takes a comprehensive approach to addressing hunger by increasing access to nutritious food, initiating change through skill-building and advocacy, and creating sustainability with outreach and training for those at risk of hunger. The CAFB is the Washington metro area's largest public, nonprofit food and nutrition education resource. To learn more about the new food distribution center, go to www.capitalareafoodbank.org
