

Food Lion Recalls Onions from Select Stores

August 3, 2020

SALISBURY, N.C. – Food Lion is announcing that one of its suppliers, Thomson International, has announced a recall of several onion varieties sold in select Food Lion stores. The FDA and CDC have announced that red onions from Thomson International are a likely source of potentially contaminated red onions linked to a multistate outbreak of Salmonella Newport.

This recall impacts jumbo red onions sold between May 24 – July 31, and jumbo white onions, jumbo yellow onions and three-pound bags of yellow onions sold between May 24 – Aug. 1. The affected items were sold at select Food Lion stores in the produce section. It also impacts sliced red onions and stir fry vegetables prepared in-store and sold in the in-store cut fruit and vegetables department at the same select Food Lion stores between May 24 – July 31. A list of stores where these items were sold can be viewed here.

Food Lion has removed all affected product from its shelves and urges customers to return the product to their local store for a full refund. Customers may also contact Food Lion's Customer Support Center at 1-800-210-9569.
