SALISBURY, N.C.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Today, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) recognized Food Lion with its 18th consecutive ENERGY STAR award for its continued leadership in protecting our environment through superior energy efficiency. Food Lion is the only grocery retailer to receive the award for 18 years consecutively.

"We are honored to serve as a leader in energy conservation in the many towns and cities we serve where there are Food Lion stores," said Susan Sollenberger, Vice-President of energy and maintenance for Food Lion. "This award speaks to our commitment to reducing carbon dioxide emissions throughout our 10-state footprint."

Since beginning a partnership with the EPA and Energy Star in 2001, Food Lion's energy reductions are equivalent to powering 92,082 homes for one year. An example of its energy-saving techniques includes Food Lion's LED store retrofit program where LED lighting is used to replace fluorescent lights inside the store. By the end of the year, almost half of Food Lion stores will have LED lights installed.

"Food Lion's application stood out among many highly-competitive submissions this year, demonstrating exemplary commitment and dedication to leadership in energy efficiency and the ENERGY STAR program," said Jean Lupinacci, ENERGY STAR Commercial and Industrial Branch Chief.

Food Lion is committed to a variety of sustainability initiatives, including energy conservation, sustainable seafood, recycling and food rescue efforts through its Food Lion Feeds program. The awards are given to organizations to recognize their contributions to reducing greenhouse gas emissions through superior energy efficiency achievements.
